Offsite 2026

WHY WE'RE DOING THIS

One room, one day, no sprint.

Seltra runs fast — most days are heads-down, shipping. Offsite 2026 is the one day we step out of that rhythm as a full team. We'll walk through what we shipped this year, be honest about what worked and what didn't, and line up the year ahead with the kind of clarity that only happens in one room, together.

THE POINT OF THE DAY

Step out of the sprint.

THE DAY

How it flows

MORNING	Arrival & grounding We start together — coffee, breakfast, and a look back at the year: what we built, what we learned, and where it fell short.
MIDDAY	Where we're headed A working session on the year ahead — the roadmap, the open questions, and what has to be true for Seltra's next chapter.
AFTERNOON	Lunch & close A shared meal, some unstructured time, and a close to the day before everyone heads back into the sprint.

INSIDE SELTRA

How we got here

Millions of merchants across Ghana, Nigeria, and the rest of Africa are already running real businesses — over WhatsApp threads and Instagram DMs, paid for in mobile money. They just don't have a storefront. Seltra turns one plain-language description of a business into a live store, and keeps running it — not a one-time generator, but an agent that stays on the job.

FROM ACCRA, WITH CODE

“Structure is a variable, not a constant. Cart and checkout never break — every hero section still feels like it was designed just for you.”

Our first attempt asked an AI to write every storefront from scratch. It broke constantly. So we rebuilt around a smaller idea: compose each store from battle-tested building blocks, and never leave checkout to chance.
